THE STORY Every space has its own rhythm. Its flow. Its feeling. Born from the creative expertise of Ege Design Studio, the Superflex tiles and planks collection transforms flexibility into environments with vision and intent. Developed through a deep exploration of natural surfaces, texture, faded woven textiles, gradients, and the interplay of colour, light and shadow.

Offering seven qualities, three perfectly compatible sizes, and endless colour combinations, it opens a unique world of design possibilities. A world where you can create compositions that reflect your ideas of shaping space to awaken the extraordinary. Great design doesn't just fill a space. It elevates it.

DISTINCT EXPRESSIONS The choice of design, construction and material helps determine the visual expression, from clear-cut definitions to soft and smooth blends. With seven constructions to choose from, you can tailor your flooring solution to match your desired look, budget, and requirements for wear resistance, acoustics and comfort.

The Superflex designs can be produced in a selection of cut or loop pile constructions ranging from 440 to 1400 g/m², made from regenerated or recycled polyamide, 80/20 New Zealand wool/polyamide blend, or 100% pure wool.

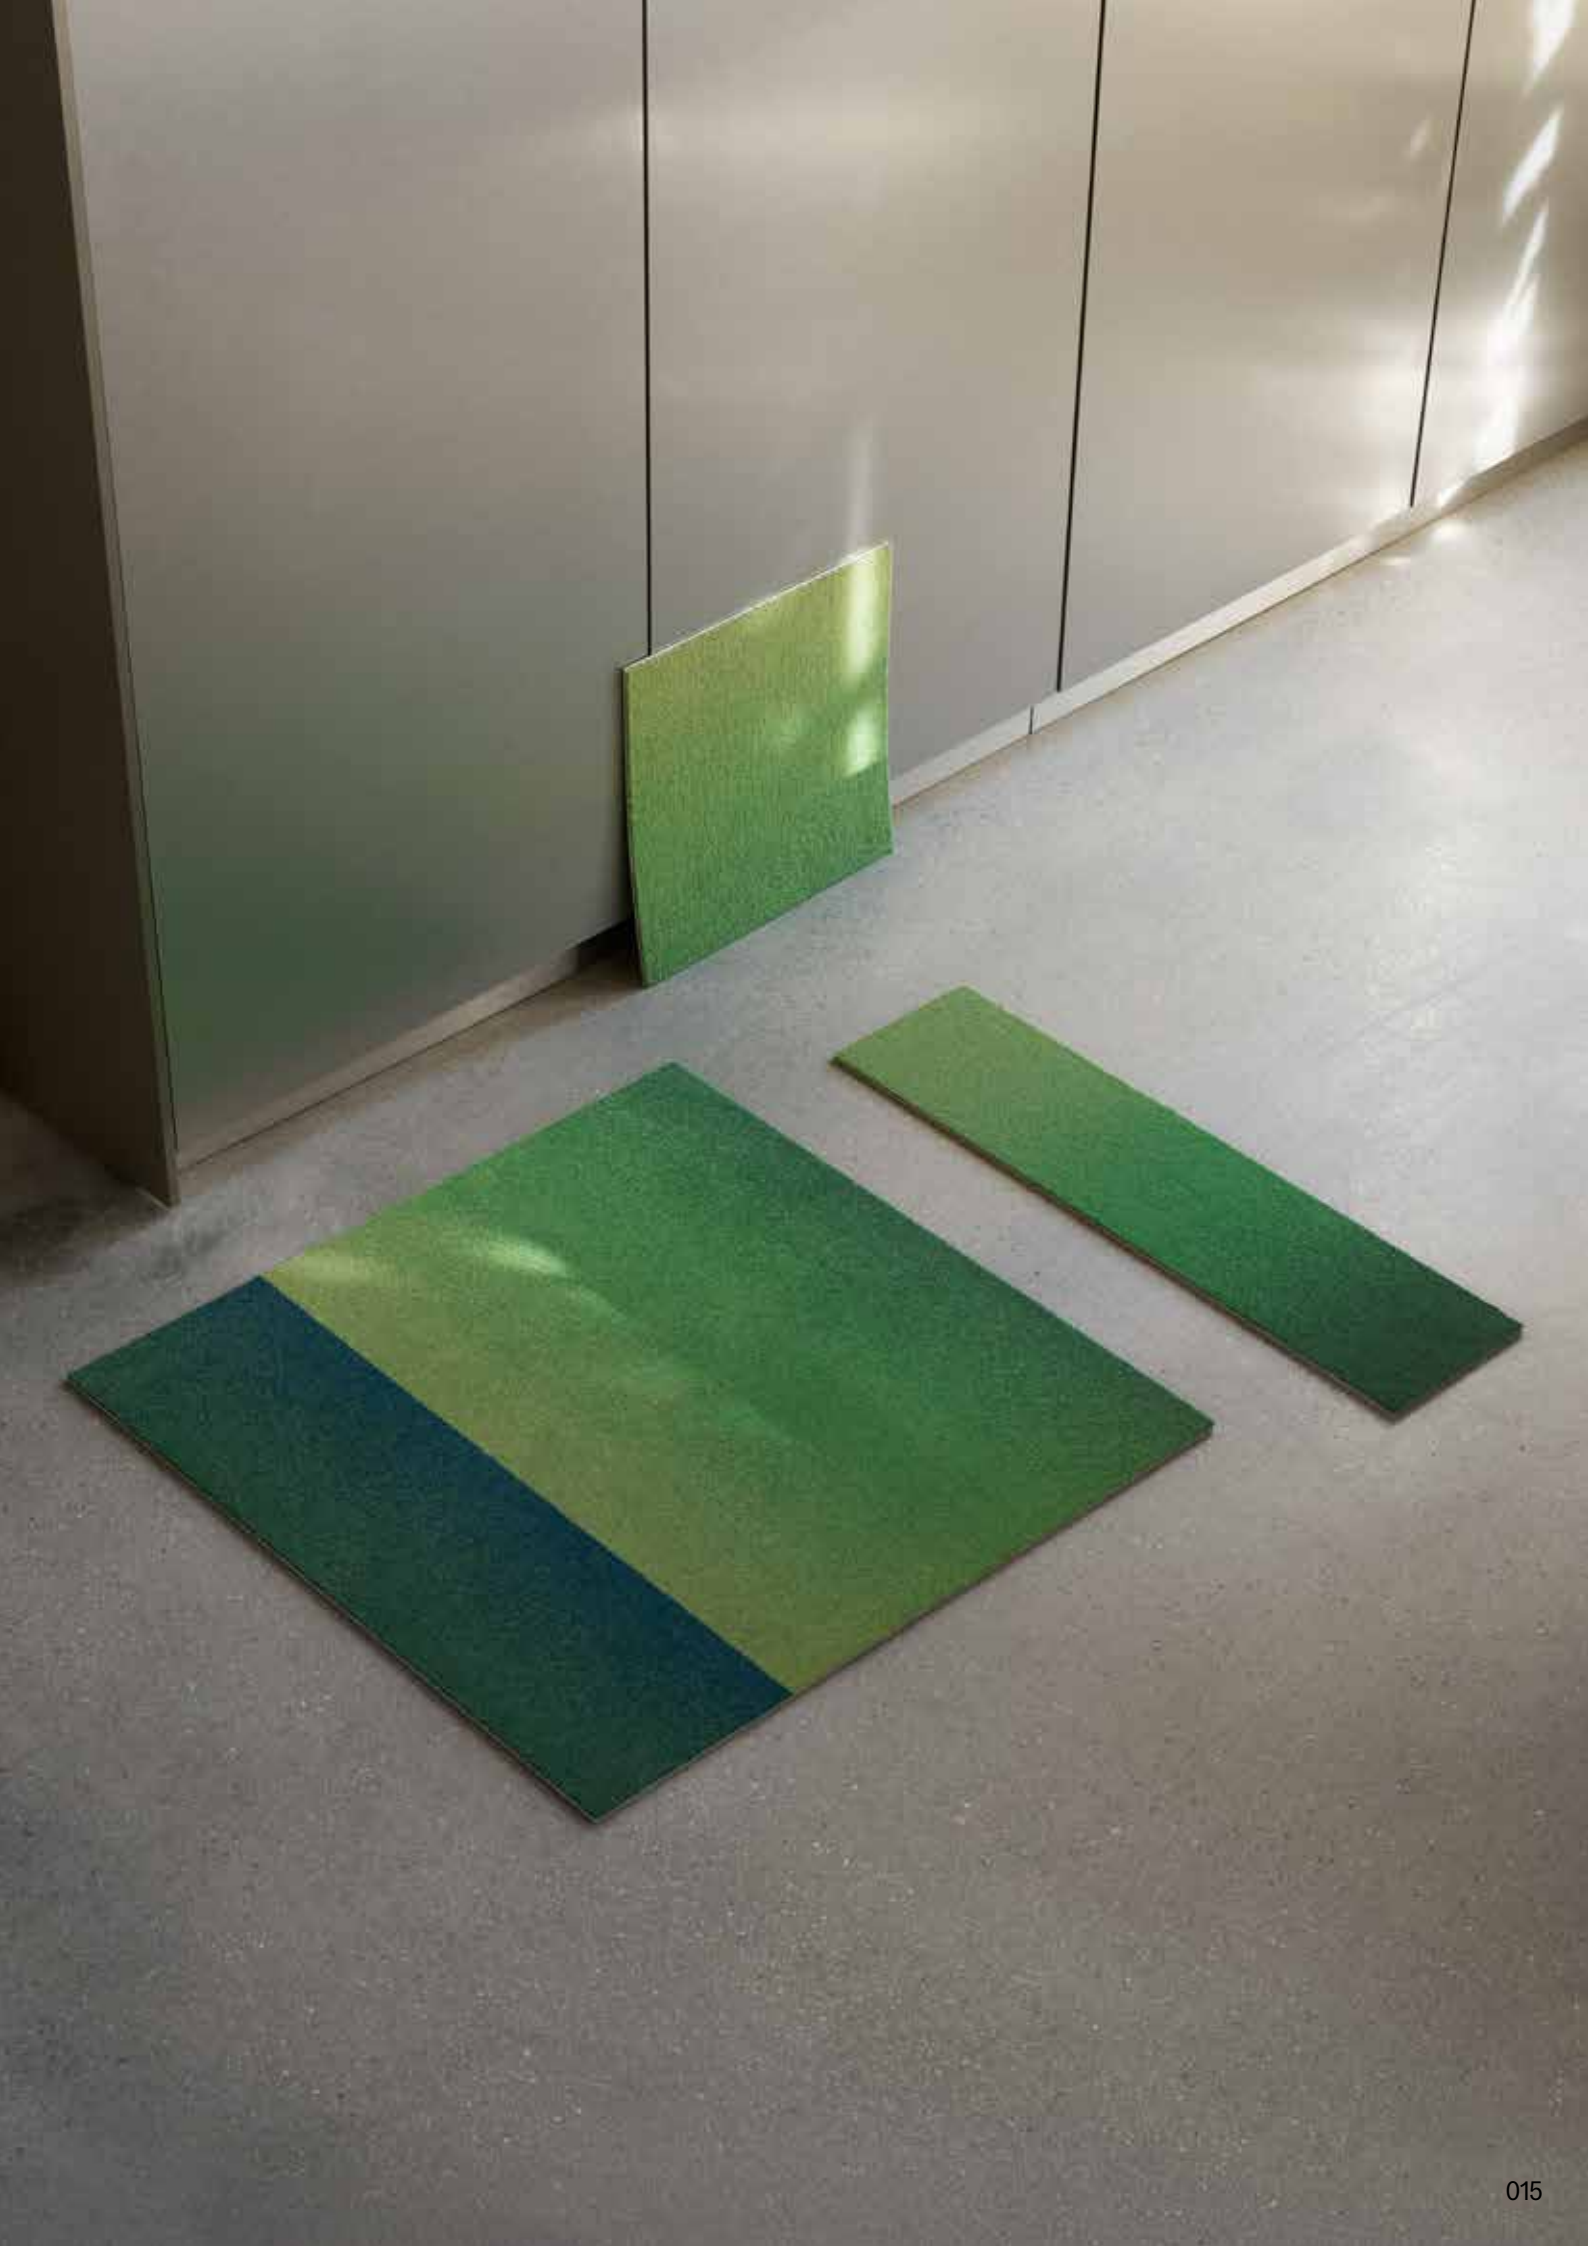

7 qualities

ENDLESS COMBINATIONS Superflex is built for creative freedom, giving you infinite ways to combine tiles and planks across patterns, colours and scales. Whether you're aiming for visual harmony, bold statements, wayfinding or clear zoning, the modular concept adapts to any space and purpose.

Applying one shared geometric scale across all formats allows tiles and planks to combine seamlessly. Available in 48×48 cm, 96×96 cm and 24×96 cm, the three sizes can be mixed freely to achieve both aesthetic and functional variation within the same flooring design.

This flexible system opens a wide range of visual expressions – from calm, continuous surfaces to striking, dynamic layouts. Explore contrasts, transitions and zones, and transform the floor into a design element that adds depth and character to any space.

Modularity in 3 sizes

COLOUR FREEDOM Colour is a tool to define space and create atmosphere. All designs come in selected colourways – carefully curated to highlight the origin and character of each design. From subtle neutrals to vivid colours. If you wish, each design can be recoloured to create your own expression.

Choose any design and explore your preferred colours from one of our four standard palettes. Each palette offers creative freedom to combine 12 base colours and 65 accent tones to define your own expression.

Use our Recolour Tool or connect with our design team for a creative conversation driven by curiosity and imagination. Together, we'll develop the yet-to-be-seen, turning ideas into extraordinary design.

ALL YOU NEED At Ege Carpets, you'll find everything you need – from seamless wall-to-wall carpets and flexible tiles to textured rugs and refined woven, tufted or shag constructions.

As a designer or architect, you often need more than one type of carpet to bring your vision to life. You might look for calm continuity in open spaces. Direction and rhythm in hallways. A durable, elegant surface at the entrance. Or a soft rug that adds warmth and tactility to the meeting room. You perhaps even want a visual red thread that ties it all together.

Our design team is here to help you choose the right design, textures and qualities for each function – from acoustics and durability to mood and materiality – ensuring that every carpet supports both your aesthetic vision and the way the space is used.

With Ege Carpets, you have all you need — all in one place.

EXPLORE OUR DESIGN TOOL Our comprehensive Design Tool supports every stage of your project – from concept to execution. Experiment with colours, patterns and textures, visualise your creations in different settings, and refine every detail until it feels just right. 'There's a kind of beautiful pattern of time on a grimy city like London that has lived a few lives.'

Infamously self-taught, Tom Dixon is an internationally renowned British designer. His works are included in permanent collections of the most prestigious museums in the world, including the V&A, London and MoMA, New York.

Tom Dixon has built his universe through intensely diverse experiences, from music, contemporary lighting, furniture and accessories to high-profile projects including the Restaurant at The Royal Academy in London, Jamie Oliver's restaurant, Barbecoa, as well as Shoreditch House. He is famous across the globe for his work, and he is the mastermind behind the design of the Industrial Landscape collection.

London is the departure point for the collection. Gritty backdrops of railways, tunnels, factories, workshops and warehouses. Imperfect surfaces and materials make up the crumbling industrial landscape while the River Thames splits the city in two, and new reflective glass towers begin to dominate the skyline.

There's a kind of beautiful pattern of time on a grimy city that has lived a few lives. As materials break, they are repaired, creating a new pattern that has its own aesthetic; deconstructed bricks, patinated metal and the grey muddy water of the Thames. A series of patterns and textures that come straight from the building of the erosion process.

The Industrial Landscape collection reinterprets the rough, raw everyday surfaces of the city that are so familiar to Tom Dixon. Each of the seven designs is available as tiles, planks and broadloom and can be recoloured to meet your requirements.

How do you approach designing a space?

'In interiors dominated by concrete, glass and metal, you need something to soften the atmosphere. The carpet is the backdrop that allows everything else to fall into place. I've always been interested in using carpet in a more architectural way – not just as a flat rug, but as something that can move in three dimensions.'

How do the physical surroundings affect us human beings?

'The more experienced I become in doing interiors, the more interested I am in not just the obvious tools of interior design which is colour, shape and comfort, but also the intangibles, the luminosity of a space, the smells of the space, the textures, the sound and the touch. People are much more than just visual, and that is why I focus so much on tactility, acoustics and smell.'

How does a carpet differ as a material in your creative process?

'From the perspective of carpet in general I think that it is something, which is all too often ignored, even though it, beside the walls, is the biggest surface. So it can have immense impact on a space, and it is also the place that gets the most wear and tear. A carpet is abused in a really aggressive way, which makes it interesting because it is something that has to perform. The carpet is so important in the context of contemporary interior, as a softening device for all kinds of technical reasons as well as being decorative.'

'The power of perfect colour combinations continues to fascinate me. It's a positive and poetic way to influence space and lift us up.'

Nicolette Brunklaus is a Dutch product designer. She holds an Art degree from Academy of Art in Groningen, and she exhibits art and design all over the world.

A tiny sample of worn linen, loosely woven and faded, began Nicolette Brunklaus' creative process of mapping textures, colours and memories. Her love of rich textile structures is obvious, and the linen sample represents a piece of industrial craft history.

The Canvas Collage collection is inspired by reflections on industry, just before the industrial revolution. Nicolette Brunklaus manipulates her own photographs to create unique designs. In this way, the design remains unaffected by popular interest while staying at the forefront of thought-provoking contemporary design.

Describe your working process

'I think I do slow design. I take photos. Lots of photos. When I go for a walk. When I cycle, visit museums, see new architecture, enjoy nature or travel. I save them on my computer, look at them and work on them to create new patterns and colour combinations. I save them again and may not look at them for years. Until one day when I come across them again and they just feel right.'

Canvas Collage represents a collection of 5 design themes that can be integrated with one another. Check out the entire Canvas Collage collection on our website.
